The creation by the genius of Mr. Florence of Judge Stote is as much of an originality as Jefferson's Rip Tan White, or Reynolds Colond Sciera, and though not invested with legendary halo, like the former, nor with the extiberant eccentricity of the latter, presents features so typical and so peculiarly observable in the mixtum composition of our political character that it presses irresistibly upon our appreciation of the weak spots in the make-up of a certain class of collisions. Mrs. Gilfory, saniable, fashiomable and oblishing incrant, is no less a true portmit of a certain class of females found in the lobby as well as in the salon, but, as represented by Mrs. Florence, is not only a great improvement on the original morally, but, in the matter of instellation, creatly superior by a large majority. Following in the footsteps of such "Dutch" specialists as Joe Emmett and George Kuight, the well-known and favorite comedian, Mr. Gus Williams, familiarly denominated "Our Gus." has constructed for himself a play, "Our German Senator, which bids fair to rival, if not excel, its predecessors in that line. Wherever it has been performed crowded houses have attested their approbation, and the press is unanimous in the praise it accords. A Boston exchange speaks thus of play and players: "Our German Senator is a farcient affair built around the character of a retired German brewer whom his ambitious wife and avarious friends have pushed into a Senatorship primarily against his will. This part affords Mr. Gus Williams ample opportunity for displaying his amissing specialties in dialect.
